Not illustrated. 1913 Excerpt: . . . of this company is that even in the manufacture of finished products, labor receives through wages and salaries less than onethird of the gross earnings of the business. The entire amount paid out in wages and salaries in the case of the Republic Iron and Steel Co. is only about six times as great as the amount which is annually carried to surplus, while in the case of the Steel Corporation it is only about four times as great as the surplus account. The most important consideration developed by this study of the distribution of the total receipts of the industry is the very small proportion of such receipts which are received by labor in the form of either wages or salaries. As a result of this fact an increase in the rate of wages does not mean a proportionate decrease in profits. RELATION OF LABOR...
