Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Statements Respecting the American Abolitionists: By Their Opponents and Their Friends; Indicating the Present Struggle Between Slavery and Freedom in the United States of America These counter-statements to portions of articles published in the British Banner of Jan. 28, Feb. 11, and March 24, 1852, have been collected to illustrate the vague and inconclusive nature of the accusations usually brought against American abolitionists, and the systematic misrepresentations to which their proceedings are subjected. Also to exhibit the disingenuousness of using detached passages from reports of speeches made by individuals on various occasions, as exponents of the principles of a society whose action is limited to a specific object. The chief design of this pamphlet, however, is to neutralize the injustice done to the anti-slavery cause, by those who allege the infidelity of abolitionists, in order to screen the reluctance evinced by ministers of the Gospel to proclaim the opening of the prison to them that are bound. The following pages show that these charges are usually untrue; and that, even if they were true, they in no degree clear the character or justify the position of the pro-slavery Churches and Clergy of the United States. The abolitionists maintain that slavery is inevitably a compound of wickedness, cruelty, and injustice; that it is the sum of all villanies; that wherever such a system prevails, and is fostered by Church and State, morals, religion, justice, and liberty are in fearful danger; and that the truest friends of these blessings are not the Churches and Clergy who countenance or advocate the slave system, but the faithful few, who in the teeth of calumny, hatred, and hostility, have devoted...
